to Economic Growth*

Lena Heron is Rural Development Advisor, Office of Agriculture, at the US Agency for International Development. She has been with USAID's Office of Agriculture since 2000. She is the USAID project manager for the BASIS AMA Collaborative Research Support Program. Ms. Heron's interests include rural and agricultural finance, risk and insurance, access to land and the integration of land and financial markets. She has conducted agricultural sector assessments, and designed and evaluated projects to promote agricultural value chain development. She is currently contributing to development of USAID policy and programming approaches to rural chronic poverty, risk and evaluation. Among other assignments prior to coming to USAID, Ms. Heron wrote the 1998 USAID Food Aid Report to Congress and managed a technical assistance project on land privatization and farm reorganization for the International Finance Corporation in Russia. She has hands-on experience in small-scale organic agriculture, and holds a Master's degree in Geography from the University of Washington in Seattle.
