

Escaping Poverty Traps

Connecting the Chronically Poor to Economic Growth

Dean Yang is Assistant Professor of Public Policy and Assistant Professor of Economics at the University of Michigan. His research is on the economic problems of developing countries. His areas of interest include: international migration; microfinance; health and development; crime and corruption; and the economics of disasters. Dean teaches Ford School courses in development economics and in microeconomics, as well as an economics department Ph.D. course in development economics. He received his undergraduate and Ph.D. degrees (both in economics) from Harvard University.